TECHFYNDER

Every idea starts with a solution to a problem. The idea for Techfynder was born in 2019 when founder and CEO, Praveen Madire, noticed that there was a growing gap in the market for utilising the skills of technology contractors to look at opportunities directly with businesses. Likewise, after understanding our European research, we found a similar demand from multinationals to avail of a direct solution to fulfil contracting positions.

He then set out to assemble a passionate and conscientious team of developers and marketers to build a global recruitment platform to bring a better future for contractors and companies. Launched in October 2019, their digital product is a free service for IT contractors to register and a subscription-based service for companies who need fast-moving, skilled technology that aligns with their business objectives and delivers rapid results to hire technology contractors. Being Ireland's latest start-up in the HR Technology space they are one of the promising companies that have seen significant growth through the worldwide COVID 19 pandemic. It has now grown from a direct HR service in Ireland to now an impressive 92 countries worldwide with its unique sourcing platform.

The Techfynder platform has seen huge demand especially in the EMEA market and was delighted to announce that their online professional community has grown to more than 52,000 tech contractors worldwide.

Today, Techfynder is recognised for its adaptability, speed, flexibility of their platform, and high success rates in finding qualified and experienced talents for all business needs. They have grown steadily, and now have over 50 talented individuals who benefit from working in a thriving and diverse company where the opportunities are endless. Techfynder is the fastest growing, multi-cultured startup in the global technology marketplace.

TILDENET

In 1977 Tildenet founder and passionate cricket supporter, Joe Downey, returned from a family trip to India and the Middle East where he had met farmers frustrated by the difficulties of growing crops in scorching temperatures - Joe devised and manufactured a system of shade netting to solve the problem and Tildenet was born.

Quickly many more applications for the woven netting emerged, first in the horticulture market and subsequently as a frost protection for sporting venues to avoid cancelling fixtures due to freezing weather. Based in Bristol, Tildenet has grown beyond recognition over the past 40 years with innovation continuing a driving force throughout that time. Now a global business with an international manufacturing operation, The Tildenet Group runs a diverse range of brands with focus in Sport, Gardening Retail, Commercial Horticulture, Construction and Industrial Textiles.

O'NEILL'S

The first O'Neills size 5 footballs were produced in 1918 by Charles O'Neill & Co., a company founded from Charles' family home on Dublin's Capel Street. During the next 50 years, O'Neills became renowned as the manufacturer of footballs and hurling balls for Gaelic games.

In 1955, following the passing of his father, Paul O'Neill took stewardship of the company. His bold ambition saw the company venture into the textile industry and the manufacture of sporting apparel.

Through the expansion of facilities in Walkinstown and Strabane, acquisition of dye houses and investment in state-of-the-art knitting technologies, Paul's vision of an entirely vertically integrated manufacturing operation has been realised. Today, each stage of the production process is overseen from the knitting of yarn through dyeing, cutting, sewing, printing and embroidery to produce high quality sport and leisurewear garments.

Over 100 years later, O'Neills is still producing the famous size 5 footballs and is still a 100% Irish owned company. From a staff of 3 in 1918, O'Neills has established itself as Ireland's largest sportswear manufacturer, employing more than 900 people across Ireland, the UK, France, Australia and beyond. Our production experience, innovation and design, has been extended from Gaelic games to include Soccer, Rugby League, Rugby Union, Boxing, Cricket and Athletics among a range of other sports.
